AG Sunday Launches Elder Exploitation Section to Expand Protections for Older Pennsylvanians; Focus will be on Financial Theft and Fraud

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE — Tuesday, November 18, 2025

HARRISBURG — Attorney General Dave Sunday announced the launch of the Office of Attorney General's Elder Exploitation Section — an expansion of protections and services for seniors, with focus on deterring financial theft and holding offenders criminally responsible.

On Tuesday, Attorney General Sunday joined legislative leaders and advocate organizations at the State Capitol Building to formally announce the section's launch.

The section will primarily focus on cases involving financial exploitation, deception, and theft from older residents — typically perpetrated by relatives, caregivers, and/or appointed conservators and powers of attorney.

"These cases are as heartbreaking as they are financially devastating to the senior victims, who are oftentimes deceived out of their life savings by someone they trust," Attorney General Sunday said. "The many partners who joined us in this announcement share the common mission of protecting seniors by raising awareness to prevent these crimes and deterring criminal behavior by holding accountable those who do harm."

The section, led by Chief Deputy Attorney General Elizabeth Schneider and Chief Agent Lucas Miller, was created by reassigning existing staff who have backgrounds and experience in the elder law space.

The section is already up and running with a caseload of about 30.

These are complex cases, involving meticulous review of financial records and other documents. Municipal police departments may not have the resources required to take on these investigations. The Elder Exploitation Section will have the resources, and expects referrals to come from police departments, county, state, and federal agencies — and other sources.

The Office of Attorney General will continue efforts to assist seniors through other sections and staff, including the Bureau of Consumer Protection, Health Care Section, Office of Public Engagement, and Medicaid Fraud Control Section, among others.

Among those on hand Tuesday were Secretary of Aging Jason Kavulich, Secretary of Banking and Securities Wendy Spicher, Pa. Sen. Wayne Langerholc Jr, Pa. Sen. Maria Collett, Pa. Rep. Maureen Madden, Pa. Rep. Steven Mentzer, and other legislators.

Also present were representatives from AARP, SeniorLAW Center, Alzheimer's Association, NOVA, LeadingAge PA, Pa. Health Care Association, Pa. Home Care Association, Pa Bankers Association, The American Legion, and VFW Department of Pennsylvania.
